

Declaration of Independence of the People of England.

I put forward this Declaration of the Independence of the People of England in the following form. Comments and advice on improvements to this declaration are invited.

We the people of England, in the year of our sovereign Queen Elizabeth II, 2013, being dissatisfied with the position we hold within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and the way in which we have been ignored as a people, being refused proper political representation as a nation within this devolved Union and perceiving many aspects of our lands, history, culture and our very existence as a people being diluted by various means, have resolved to take action.

It is the desire of the people of England having described above the concerns of and threats to, their very existence in the kingdom of England and as a nation of people, that by their free will and consent through free and open referendum or by any other freely and peacefully derived collective decision with which the majority have agreed to be free of British and European Union rule, do hereby declare themselves independent of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and the European Union, and on the date and time given below, the re-establishment of the Kingdom of England shall take place under the Governance of the English Constitution 2012 and freely accept the consequences of this declaration.
